I love Francesca Lia Block's writing and always have. Her words are just so poetic, so lyrical, and her descriptions so apt, interesting and thought provoking that you just savor every word and every sentence. Her metaphors and allegories weave the story together and the characters, the scenery, the dialog, everything just seems to sparkle.

Francesca Lia Block's writing is luminous, but never more so than in this reimagining of the Persephone myth. From a desert paradise where Primavera grows up with the gift of singing flowers to life, to the dark and glowing streets of Elysia, to Under and beyond every detail is a feast. But it isn't just sparkle and flash.
