As your gut instinct is the most ancient and primal “sixth sense” you have, it is the one you can rely upon the most. One example of your gut instinct in action would be deciding to spontaneously avoid walking down a road at night because something “feels off.” That feeling is your gut instinct warning you that danger is afoot.

Gut instincts. A child raised by someone narcissistic can experience gaslighting. The child expresses how it feels about something their parent has done, for example. The narcissist responds by telling them: You're wrong. Too sensitive. The child faces two options. They think: Either my parent is right, or my gut instincts are.

Instincts vs. Intuition "Instincts" derives from the word "instinctus" or "impulse," indicating it's the body's biological tendency to make one choice over another. It is the innate inclination toward a particular behavior that typically relies on a pattern of behavior in response to certain stimuli.

Instinct and Intuition In Unison. Though different, the two may work together. Your intuition might quickly process observations and trigger your instincts to respond in the case of an emergency, where you need to trust your instincts. Cases like this happen in life-threatening situations, such as potential traffic accidents and in personal attacks.
