How Babies Think

The Science Of

Childhood

Our brains grow faster between the ages of 0-3 than any later point in life. When babies have nurturing relationships with parents and caregivers, enriching early learning experiences, and strong physical health and nutrition, they have a crucial foundation for healthy development. But when babies don't get what their growing brains need to thrive, this leads to life-long developmental, educational, social, and health challenges.

About The Campaign
| Think Babies™

Babies as young as five months old make distinctions about categories of events that their parents do not, revealing new information about how language develops in humans.

So in some ways, we think that this baby's thinking is like the thinking of the most brilliant scientists. Let me give you just one example of this. One thing that this baby could be thinking about, that could be going on in his mind, is trying to figure out what's going on in the mind of that other baby.

The Science Of

Childhood
How a baby sorts objects can tell researchers something about how babies think. Careful study design is also especially important when working with babies because it's easy to jump to wrong conclusions. For example, various studies have shown that babies tend to put toy cows and horses in one group and cars and planes in another.
