In The Earth Abides The

Earth Abides is a 1949 American post-apocalyptic science fiction novel by George R. Stewart. The novel tells the story of the fall of civilization from deadly disease and the emergence of a new culture with simpler tools. Set in the 1940s in Berkeley, California, the story is told by Isherwood Williams, who emerges from isolation in the mountains to find almost everyone dead. Earth Abides won the inaugural International Fantasy Award in 1951. It was included in Locus Magazine's list of best All

Earth Abides - Wikipedia

An instant classic upon its original publication in 1949 and winner of the first International Fantasy Award, Earth Abides ranks with On the Beach and Riddley Walker as one of our most provocative and finely wrought post-apocalyptic works of literature. Its impact is still fresh, its lessons timeless.

"In the Earth Abides the Flame" was definitely better than the first. The plot was thick enough that it distracted from the lack of character building. Still I fought with the randomness that Kirkpatrick assigns his character back-stories.

In the Earth Abides the Flame by Russell Kirkpatrick

What you most likely haven't encountered is an end-of-the-world vision like the one George R. Stewart spins in Earth Abides - a zombie-less, nuke-less, cannibal-less world that is all the more compelling in its quiet realism. Earth Abides is a gentler, slower story of the end of civilization than most of its peers.

Earth Abides by George R. Stewart - Goodreads

"Earth Abides" is about how a killing type of virus strain suddenly arises by mutation and spreads quickly because of air travel all over the world. It kills millions of people.
