Lasagna Gardening A New System

Pat built that first garden out of necessity-- she needed a source of fresh herbs for her country inn, and she needed a way to garden without the laborious digging and tilling of traditional gardening methods. In Lasagna Gardening, Pat describes that first layered garden and the more than 30 that followed it. Through her story she shares the lessons she's learned in her nearly 50 years of gardening experience.

The best time to start your lasagna garden is in the fall, when the brown stuff is readily available in your yard. Start by laying newsprint (five- to 10-sheets-thick) or cardboard directly on flat ground. Soak it well to encourage decomposition. This bottom layer acts as a barrier against weeds and will smother any vegetation underneath it.
