Restoration, Politics, Religion and Culture: Britain and ...

The Manchester Regiment was a Jacobite unit raised during the 1745 Rebellion and the only significant number of English recruits willing to fight for Charles Edward Stuart in his attempt to regain the British throne for his father. Raised in late November 1745, the majority were captured in December at Carlisle; eleven officers and sixteen members of the rank and file were executed in 1746, over a quarter of all those executed for their role in the Rising.

Indeed Pittock has argued that alongside romanticised Jacobitism in the 19th century there emerged a radical nationalist Jacobitism, which he calls 'a political ideology and a messianic myth of enduring force' (The Invention of Scotland: Stuart Myths and National Identity, 1638 to the Present, Routledge, 1991). This, with its commitment to Scottish statehood and associations with attributes such as struggle (against England), loyalty and Highland patriotism, has had a powerful and clearly ...
