It's hard to describe how I really feel about Louise Erdrich's The Beet Queen. I knew when Erdrich included a family tree in the beginning of the novel, that it was going to be intense. That's what The Beet Queen was: intense, unfortunate, and heartbreaking. The Beet Queen tells different narratives from different point of views during greatly influence the message it conveys.

Through the skillful use of tone and symbolism, the author is able to show the powerful way in which the environment impacts the two children, Karl and Mary. The tone of this passage is dull and gloomy.

Louise Erdrich once said that her novels fell "together like a quilt, a crazy quilt," and The Beet Queen is no exception. The author has constructed a powerful novel out of many voices and individual stories. The novel begins in 1932, with young Mary and Karl Adare getting off a train in Argus, North Dakota by themselves.
