Loren Eiseley, a literary naturalist and anthropologist, knows these places. As he writes in the opening chapter of The Night Country, Along the uneasy border the old life of the wild has come back into its own. Weeds grow and animals slip about in the night where no man dares to hunt them. A thin uncertain line fringes the edge of oppression.

[DOC] The Night Country Loren Eiseley
The Night Country by Loren Eiseley. In one of his books, the naturalist, anthropologist, and inveterate walker Loren Eiseley tells of groping his way through an impossibly thick fog and coming suddenly face to face with a crow who shrieks in what Eiseley imagines to be horror. The crow, Eiseley surmises, was disoriented by the fog and, assuming it was flying much higher than it actually was, also assumed that the human it encountered must have learned how to walk in mid-air, and had ...
